GAMBLERS IN COURT.

STATE MAKING A STRONG CASE AGAINST POLICY MEY

TRIAL WILL CONTINUE TO-DAY.

JUDGE PROST ASKS JUDGE FISHER TO SIT AT THE HEARING.

Five Frequenters Discharged, but One a Woman, May Be Rearrested on Later Evidence Connecting Her With the Game-Other News.

The trial of the gamblers, who were arrested in the raid made on the policy shop at 6 State Line street several days ago by Judge Pfost, of the North side city court, was begun in that court yesterday morning. Owing to the alleged prejudice existing in the mind of Judge Pfost, he refused to sit on the benow furing the trial of the cases, and Judge Pisher, of the South side city court, presided. The trial lasted all day and an adjournment was taken until this morning.

court, presided. The trial lasted all day and an adjournment was taken until this morning.

Five of the frequenters who were arrested were discharged, the state failing to introduce sufficient evidence to warrant the court in binding them over. The principal fight is being made on John Colline, who is charged with being the proprietor, or in charge. Robert Stewart, the prosecuting witness, testified yesterday that he bought two policy tickets from Colline; paid him the money and received the returns of the drawing at Colline's establishment. Joseph Cripe testified that he bought one policy ticket at 6 State Line street and that Colline wrote the ticket and accepted the money for the same. C. B. Hewlett, who was a candidate for representative on the Populist ticket, at the last election, testified that he made the raid on the gambling house, and that he employed Stewart and Cripe to secure evidence against Colline and the others.

All the effects of the policy shop secured in the raid were introduced in evidence, and if the state fails to secure a conviction it will be no fault of the prosecuting attorneys. The state is represented by County Attorney Miller and Attorney Ben S. Henderson, who are making a very strong fight against Colline. The policymen are represented by Attorneys Hale and Smith.

Mary Cummings, one of the five alleged frequenters released yesterday, may be rearrested on a new warrant charging her with "writing policy." One of the witnesses who testified after she had been released stated that he had bought tickets from her. It is now charged that she was not a frequenter, but one of the employes of the St.

es who testified after she had been released stated that he had bought tickets from her. It is now charged that she was not a frequenter, but one of the employes of the St. Joseph combine, which has a monopoly on the policy business in Kansas City, Kas. As soon as the state began to introduce its most positive witnesses the attorneys for the policymen shifted their defense. They will lay great stress on the fact that the raid was made through spitework, and that it was the outgrowth of a fight between two Populist factions in this city. Whether the fact that the arrest of the gamblers was brought about through a Populist row will cause the release of the prisoners is a question yet to be determined.

SMALLEY ADJUDGED INSANE.

Independent Candidate for Sheriff Will Be Sent to an Asylum.

Asylum.

1. L. Smalley will not make the race for riff as an independent Kepublican canhate. It was announced that he would in against Sheriff J. W. Longfellow, but stead of opposing Sheriff Longfellow, but stead of opposing Sheriff Longfellow at he polls, he will be a guest of the sheriff t least until admission can be secured for him to the state insane asylum. Smalley, who has been engaged in the produce business at the market house in Kansas City, Mo.. for some time, recently left a notice of his candidacy for sheriff with various newspapers and an evening paper published it. Soon after the announcement was made the "candidate" disappeared. He was arrested at Council Grove, Kas.. Sunday on a charge of insanity. Yesterday he was brought to this city by Council Grove officers and turned over to the local authorities, tried before a jury in the probate court and found insane.

This is the fourth time Smalley has been adjudged insane. He was released from the asylum the third time nearly ten years ago, when he was thought to be fully restored. His insanity is due to an injured spine, received twenty years ago, when but 18 years old, by carrying his father, who was an invalid. He is of a good family. Fred, son of W. F. Prier, the Missouri side foundryman, was given a trial in the same court and adjudged insane. Young Prier's case is extremely sad. The Prier family has lived in this city for years and is well known and highly respected. The young man who was adjudged insane yesterday was educated in the public schools of this city, and is well known. He has considerable property. Prier's mind has not been right for the past three years, due to an injury received several years ago. He was at one time received by the leading society women of this city, but when they discovered his mind was affected, they declined his calls. This, it is claimed, had much to do with causing his complete insanity.

A pathetic scene was enacted when the young man attempted to convince the jury that he was not insane. He made a pitiful talk, but it was very disconnected. He pleaded with the jurors to not send him to the asylum. His brother, Arthur, was present and was moved to tears by the proceedings. He will likely be placed in a private asylum. Prier is not violent, but his condition is such that it is not safe to leave him alone, and his father decided it would be best to have him placed in an institution where he may receive medical treatment.

TRAMPLED BY A HORSE. Robert Piper, Foreman at Dold's

Packing House, Narrowly Escapes Death.

Escapes Death.

Robert Piper, a foreman at Dold's packing house, had a narrow escape from being trampled to death last evening by a large stallion owned by J. T. Kinahan. As a result of the vicious attack of the horse, Mr. Piper is lying in a dangerous condition at his home, 33 Everett avenue, with several bones in his breast broken and his head and face cut in a frightful manner.

Kinahan, as had been his usual custom, was exercising the horse in the street. The horse was about to get beyond his control when Mr. Piper came along. He was returning home from work. At the request of Mr. Kinahan he attempted to assist in quieting the animal. As he approached, the big horse made a vicious lungs at him, striking him full in the breast with his fore feet, Piper was knocked to the ground. The horse went at the unfortunate man in a most vicious manner, and only for the timely arrival of assistance he would undoubtedly have been trampled to death.

Piper was removed to his home and Dr. Mitchell summoned to dress the injuries, There is some talk of causing the arrest of Mr. Kinahan on a charge of criminal carelessness. The residents of that neighborhood claim that he has been in the habit of exercising the horse in the streets for some time, and that a number of children have had narrow escapes from being injured.

THE NEWS AT LEAVENWORTH. Rev. Mr. T. M. Boss Left a Large Fortune-School Teachers Mad

at Stryker. The will of Rev. Mr. Thomas M. Boss, who died several months ago, was admitted to probate yesterday. The estate is worth fully $100,000, nearly all of which is in stocks, bonds and mortgages on real wealthy man will be surprising to most people in Leavenworth. He inherited the money that he left to his family from the estate of his father, who died in Connecticut six years ago.

The provisions of the will filed yester-day leave as the first bequest all the household furniture, bonds, stocks and money of the deceased to Mrs. Annie L. Boss, widow of the testator. The valuable library of the deceased is divided between Roger C., Charles L., Edith F. and Agness Boss, the four children. The books each is to receive are specified, but the library is not to be divided during the lifetime of the mother.

to be divided during the lifetime of the mother.

The money, stocks and bonds of the estate are to be controlled and invested during the lifetime of the mother by the two sons, who are to pay each of the children $250 annually, and the mother is to have the rest. In case of the remarriage of the mother, the annual income of the children is to be increased $150 each. At the death of the mother, the estate is to be divided equally among the four children or their natural heirs. Mrs. Boss is named as executrix without bond. The witnesses to the will were Mayor and Mrs. J. D. Edmond and Mrs. Mary D. Wright.

The will of Louis Marclof was also admitted to probate. He leaves a farm of 100 acres to his wife during her lifetime and after her death it is to be divided equally between his daughter, Ella Marclof, and a stepson, Frank Soupisit. The wife is named as executrix without bond.

Only a Few Can Pass.

Superintendent Stryker, Populist, seem.

Superintendent Stryker, Populist, seems to have gotten up an entirely new set of questions for the teachers in this and neighboring counties. There is much indignation among the teachers and their friends over the questions that have been submitted. Some of them have a political flavor, as the three following, taken from the ten in history, will show:

"6. What is a revenue tariff? a protective tariff? Name one of each.

"8. Give a brief account of the great strike now in progress. State within 10 cents the price per bushel of wheat in your county seat and Chicago. How do you account for the increased price this year over the past few years?

"10. Give history of the sub-treasury established during Van Buren's administration."

Not one of the forty teachers made an at-tempt to answer the following question, which came under the head of civil govern-ment: "Name three prohibitions upon the states, which were made for the same rea-sons as the three corresponding ones upon the United States."

May Repair the Planters' House.

A meeting was held yesterday to settle up the financial affairs of the Planters' house, the oldest and one of the best hotels ever in Leavenworth. Messrs, Voughn and Deathridge, of Kansas City; Sidney Hayden, of Holton, and J. H. Atwood, of this city, met yesterday with the creditors who have claims against the property and considerable time was spent in trying to reach terms of agreement. Last evening it was stated that everything was progressing nicely and an arrangement would likely be reached whereby all the creditors would get part of the money due on their claims. It is said that there is a bright prospect of the hotel being reopened at an early date, probably in time for the reunion.

THEOSOPHICAL LOTUS HOME.

CHILDREN TO BE REARED ARIGHT AND DRUNKARDS CURED.

Great Plans of the Kansas City Society-Mrs. Tingley Said to Have Found a Cure for the Liquor Habit.

The executive committee of the Kansas City Theosophical Society has under consideration the founding of a Lotus home for children rescued from the environments of the North end and for the cure of inebriates. The plans have progressed so far that, according to Dr. J. P. Knoche, the president of the society, such a home will be a fact before next summer.

The Theosophical Society intends to buy farm near Kansas City where the home will be established. As many children as will be established. As many children as can be provided for will be taken there from the slums for at least five or six months each year and placed in the pure country air, where they will have a chance to develop physically and mentally. A number of men and women have already offered their services free of charge and for the sake of charity, to undertake the work of educating and refining the children who are born and live in degrading environments. Suitable buildings will be erected for a home for the children. Those that are old enough will be taught how to work on a farm and in the course of time it is proposed to establish a system of practical industrial training in several lines of trade. "Hundreds of cuildren in Kansas City are growing up surrounded by the lowest order of moral filth," said Dr. Knoche last night. "These children will not be responsible for what they do when they are grown if they are not taken out of such surroundings and given a chance to develop. What we want to do is to take them out into the country where they can get pure air, and then let them work and play there under the direction of some person who thoroughly understands human nature and knows how to direct the energies of the children. Already we have had a number of persons to whom this matter has been broached offer a part of their time each summer to this work."

In connection with this philanthropic means the country that the letter of the children works. can be provided for will be taken there ready we have had a number of persons to whom this matter has been broached offer a part of their time each summer to this work."

In connection with this philanthropic movement has lately developed a still greater movement. The Kansas City Theosophical Society will, if present reports from the East as to the efficacy of the cure are verified, establish a hospital where inchriates will be cured free of charge. Mrs. Catherine A. Tingley, the esoterichead of the Theosophical Society in America, is at present personally at work in New York reforming drunkards. She began the work of eradicating drunkenness several weeks ago. Mrs. Tingley founded the Lotus Home for Friendless and Destitute Children, at Pleasant Valley, N. J., early this summer. When the home was opened it was whispered that she had still another scheme on foot for the benefit of humanity. This proved to be the curing of inebriates. The first patient was a laborer who was addicted to the use of liquor. When he consented to allow himself to be used as the lirst patient he had been on a protracted spree for three weeks. He continued to drink for three days after he became the patient of Mrs. Tingley, and then lost all desire for strong drink.

Mrs. Tingley says that the cure was discovered by a Western physician who had been a drunkard and morphine fiend. When in a deplorable condition one day he wandered out into the suburbs of the city and aydown on the grass. He had a consuming thirst and absently plucked a leaf from a weed near him and began chewing it. To his surprise he soon found that it allayed his thirst. He immediately went to work on his discovery and after two years it is now stated to be perfected and wholly efficacious. This is the cure that will be used by the local society of Theosophists.

HIGHEST CLASS HORSES. More of an Eastern Element in This

All the boxes and the pick of the reserved seats for the show have been sold. All the horses to be seen at the show have arrived, or are on the way, and most of them will be stabled at Fairmount park to-day. Ball Bros., of Versailles, Ky., arrived yesterday afternoon with one car of as choice saddle horses as Kentucky affords. William Neil, of Columbus, O., who arrived Sunday, yesterday expressed himself as being much pleased with the grounds at Fairmount park and with the provisions for the care of the horses. W. O. East Boulevard Condemnations Will Be Paid Within the Next Few Days. Comptroller Lund will to-day send circulars to all persons whose property was condemned for the East boulevard, informing them that he will be ready within the next few days to pay them the amounts of their awards. All their claims must be submitted to the city counselor and by him approved. A number of matters must be attended to before a claim can be paid. It must be ascertained that all city and county taxes against the property have been paid and that there are no judgments hanging over it in any of the courts. The total amount to be paid out for this boulevard is $88,000.

The city has paid $285,700 for the North Comptroller Lund will to-day send circuis $8,000.

The city has paid $385,700 for the North and South paseos during the past two months, and only $3,000 remains to be paid.

PLAYING CARDS.

They Were First Brought to Europe From the East by the Gypsies.

Gypsies.

Playing cards are an importation from the East, and their origin is to be sought for in the most remote antiquity, says the Hoston Herald. Their introduction into Europe, which took place about the end of the thirteenth century, was due to Gypsies. It must not, however, be imagined that these very ancient cards, derived from a quarter so remote, bore much resemblance to those now in use, which are mainly, in point of fact, of French origin. They bore emblematical figures, mysteriously grouped in accordance with the lore of Ind, and were doubtless employed rather for the fancied interpretation of the will of an unseen God than for amusement. Much research has been employed in seeking the origin of playing cards, and there has been no little controversy regarding the date of their first appearance in Europe. For a long time it was generally believed that playing cards were first invented in Europe and that Jaquemin Gringonneur, a French painter, had first painted a deck of them to serve as pastime for the melancholic King Charles VI., of France.

ed a deck of them to serve as pastime for the melancholic King Charles VI., of France.

That such had been the case is shown by the fact that there are still preserved at the Paris library seventeen cards which had been painted by that artist for the purpose indicated, as an account book of the court treasurer of Charles VI. conclusively proves, wherein the expenditure of a certain amount paid to Gringonneur for three decks of playing cards, painted in gold and colors, is duly entered.

Later researches have proved, though, that cards had been introduced in Europe before that time, and an Italian author, Feliciano Bussi, in the history of Viterbo, cites a passage from an unpublished chromicle of Viterbo, Nicola de Coveluzzo, wherein it is mentioned that playing cards were brought to Europe in lay by the Saracens. This statement is supported by the fact that the Spanlards, who were the first to come in contact with the Saracens after their conquest of the libet an peninsula, call their cards "naipes," which word undoubtedly is derived from "La-eeb," the Saracen name of the game.

A COCKTAIL IN GERMAN.

The Beer Loving Teutons Have a Terrible Time With Mixed Drinks.

From the Chicago Record.

"What's a rickey?" asked the book agent, who is a total abstainer.

"That depends on where you get it. If it is made right, it's a chunk of ice, the juice of a lime, a siug of gin and then some seltzer. If you'd order one out at the summer garden that I went to the other night you'd probably get a snit of beer with a cherry in it. That's the best place I ever struck."

"What was the matter?" asked the dentist.

"What was the matter?" asked the dentist.

"Oh, a man tried to polson me, that's all.

"Oh, a man tried to polson me, that's all.

I didn't want to drink beer, so I took a long chance and ordered a cocktail. Did you ever see what happens in a German place when you order a cocktail? Well, it simply throws all the machinery out of gear. The waiter has to go and consult the manager, and the manager calls a conference of bartenders and they all get together and talk it over, and then somebody gets out a book and reads the directions. They put a tumbler out on the bar, and every man that remembers anything that goes into a cocktail comes and shoots it into that tumbler. I don't know myself, but a friend of mine says that the first thing a German puts into a cocktail is a jigger of Pilsner beer. Then they begin on the green bottles behind the bar and finish up with a little Rhine wine and a straw. I know it took them half an hour to compound this—whatever it was they brought me. It came on in a kind of small fruit dish and had cherries, orange peel, watermelon, pineapple and several other kinds of fruit around the edges and some—"
"I guess it wasn't bad at that," said the dentist, laughing.
"Well, it broke all records with me. I tried to drink it, but I had to weaken. It seemed to have every ingredient except the one that makes a cocktail worth drinking.

tried to drink it, but I had to weaken. It seemed to have every ingredient except the one that makes a cocktail worth drinking. I know I could taste the caraway seed in it. They put a few caraway seed into everything. That friend of mine came very near closing the place, though. She ordered a Remsen cooler. They had an awful time handling that order. My friend ordered it at half-past 8 and at 11 o'clock, just as we were about to take a car, the waiter brought a tall glass of something brown with watercress and red sugar on top of it. The Germans are a great people, all right, but they can't mix drinks. They don't believe in mixed drinks, and so they do what they can—" do what they can—"

One of the fashionable New York shoe stores now advertises: "Thin limbs transformed into rounded beauty while you wait. Price, 50 cents." Investigation disclosed the fact that this good news is exclusively for the bicycle girl. By paying 50 cents extra, any pair of high bicycle boots or leggings may be so padded that there is apparent beauty in the rounded curves.—New York correspondence in Pittsburg Dispatch.

Very few wheelmen will object to the rule passed by the district commissioners, requiring all cyclists in the streets of Washington to ride with the head erect. On the score of appearance, health and safety it might be well to incorporate a similar regulation in the rules of the road for New York. 304 West 6th St., 31UVE NEURING Rural Delivery and Highways.

From the St. Louis Star. Missourians, especially those who are in-terested in the good roads movement, will read with considerable interest the follow-ing brief criticism from the Brooklyn Standard Union upon the benefits of rural postal delivery. The Standard Union says: "It secures the prompt and regular de-livery of mail matter to people who reside at considerable distances from postoffices, and who, by reason of being on their farms or on account of the condition of the roads, are unable to reach their postoffices except at great inconvening altogether uncertain as to whether the rural mails can be delivered promptly if the country roads are in the impassable condition that they frequently are. In fact, the one great obstacle in the way of rural postal delivery is the unimproved condition of the highways. A very good suggestion in this line is made by the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, which says:

"There are sections that have good roads and the government ought to give them the preference in establishing the delivery system in the country. Communities not en-terprising enough to build good roads should not expect to be rewarded for their inertness by having their newspapers and letters brought to their doors."

There seems to be a good deal of com-mon sense in this, and it is quite possible that the government in its experiments with the rural postal delivery system might contribute materially to the good roads movement by discriminating, as suggested, in favor of those districts which have bein rayor or those districts which have be-gun the improvement of the highways. Certain it is that by every means possible the necessity for better roads should be impressed upon the minds of that class of farmers and rural landowners who cannot as yet be made to understand that good roads will contribute as much to their own well being as it would to others who have to use the roads, to say nothing of the greater comfort to these same rural in-habitants. There is no doubt that the rural postal delivery is greatly desired by the majority of farmers and others living in the rural districts, and there is every p in a few years it will prevail to a considerable extent; but it is not of half as much able extent; but it is not of half as much importance, nor is it to be compared in value to good roads. There is really no question before the American people to-day that is of as vital importance, or comes so close to home as that of highway improvement, and Missouri is, or ought to be at least particularly interested. at least, particularly interested
